

Have a Say, Design It Your Way

The City of Edmonton invites residents to get involved in the transformation of their community's physical layout and design.

Planning Academy courses offer citizens a unique opportunity to learn about and get involved in the planning and development process.

"The City wants to work with residents to promote the good urban planning that goes into building a great city," says Scott Pragnell, Senior Planner at the City of Edmonton. "Resident participation will help us all create a more vibrant, livable, sustainable and transit-oriented city."

The first Planning Academy course of the fall 2013 session is on Tuesday, October 29, 2013. Anyone interested in learning how to play a part in planning Edmonton's growth and change can sign up for one or more of the courses including:

- Land Use Planning: The Big Picture – October 29, 2013
- Transportation – November 2, 2013
- Transit Oriented Development – November 7, 2013
- Urban Design – November 9, 2013
- Come Plan with Us: Using Your Voice – November 14 & 20, 2013
- Getting a Grip on Land Use Planning – November 30, 2013

Participants earn a Certificate of Participation by completing three core courses and one elective course.
