Hackers take a romp through City's open data

As part of the 2014 International Open Data Day Hackathon, 50 computer developers and 'hackers' will scour the City of Edmonton's open datasets and create apps, games and various other wonderful solutions.

Media are invited to attend an availability with Chris Moore, the City of Edmonton's Chief Information Officer. Moore will discuss why Edmonton is a leader nationally and internationally in the provision of open data to its citizens.

Date: Saturday, February 22, 2014
Time: 10 a.m.
Location: Outside the main floor Makerspace at the Stanley Milner Public Library

Because of space limitations, the Hackathon is closed to the public, but media are welcome to attend any part of the event. The Hackathon runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
