Tips too good to trash (only recycle)

Edmonton residents will start receiving important waste-handling information in their mailboxes this week.

Wondering what should go in the garbage, in the recycling bag or to an Eco Station? The Urban Recycler newsletter has all the information you need to manage your household waste properly. The newsletter also contains a useful "what goes where" guide that can be removed and kept as a handy sorting reference tool.

The latest edition of the Urban Recycler features the new northeast Eco Station and explains the importance of taking household hazardous waste to any of the city's four Eco Stations. It also explains how to cut your summer waste in half by 'Going Bagless' and leaving the grass clippings on your lawn after you mow.

Edmonton is a leader in sustainable waste management and residents play an essential role in reducing, reusing and recycling their waste. If you have not received your Urban Recycler by May 25, call 311 to have a copy sent to you or download it from edmonton.ca/waste.
