

Mayor Iveson joins big city mayors from across country in call to make cities a ballot box issue on voting day

Mayor Don Iveson joins Mayors of Vancouver, Toronto, Regina and several others in a coordinated series of media events on Tuesday, October 13 at 10 am (MST), capping their city-focused federal election campaign.

During the media events, Canada's Big City Mayors will call on 21 million Canadians who live in their cities to make their vote count on October 19, and make it a day where cities from coast to coast to coast are heard at the ballot box.

Throughout the federal election campaign, the mayors have consistently advanced practical solutions to the challenges Canadians face every day. This includes reducing commute times, and ensuring safer roads and bridges, cleaner water and more affordable housing.

This coordinated call for action by Canada's Big City Mayors illustrates the collective will of mayors to work together, and as effective partners with the next federal government.
