

Test your home's energy efficiency!

The City of Edmonton, Edmonton Public Library and Alberta Real Estate Foundation are proud to launch the brand new Green Home Energy Toolkits. The kits, available at numerous EPL locations, provide tools, tests and information to help understand household energy use.

"The Green Home Energy Toolkit will help Edmontonians identify some ways to save energy and money," says Councillor Michael Walters. "These kits support the goals of the recently approved Energy Transition Strategy and also encourage citizens to play an active role in supporting Edmonton's goal of becoming an even more sustainable and resilient city."

The kits are free and can be checked out at the library just like any book. Each of the 10 kits available throughout the city contain a guidebook to help citizens navigate the kit's materials, as well as numerous readings about energy efficiency.

"For the last 25 years, our foundation has strived to support initiatives that make a real difference in the industry and in the lives of Albertans," says Charlie Ponde, Chair of the Alberta Real Estate Foundation. "By taking the initiative on energy efficiency, the City of Edmonton is a model for many other municipalities across the province."

"EPL believes in being a good steward of our environment. We aim to be as efficient as possible, including how we provide resources and how we operate branches," says Sharon Karr, Manager of EPL's Collection Management and Access division. "Since our mission is 'We share', it only makes sense for us to provide easily accessible ways for customers to be environmentally friendly."

Join the energy transition movement by reducing greenhouse gas emissions from your home. You can learn best practices to conserve energy, save money and join other Edmontonians on the quest to become a carbon neutral city.
