

Calling all Foodies!

June 16, 2016

The Edmonton Food Council is recruiting four new members to be part of a dynamic team helping shape the future of food and agriculture in Edmonton.

As a volunteer committee of the City, the Edmonton Food Council's primary role is to advise City of Edmonton administration and help implement fresh: Edmonton's Food and Agriculture Strategy. Going into its fourth year, the Edmonton Food Council engages with community on relevant and timely issues related to food and urban agriculture. Specific activities of the Edmonton Food Council includes:

- Providing advice to City of Edmonton administration and other key stakeholders
- Monitoring and reporting on the progress of implementation
- Identifying emerging issues and opportunities
- Proposing key work priorities to the City
- Maintaining relationships with the food and urban agriculture community
- Engaging with the community on relevant and timely issues
- Facilitating connections between key players, such as various City departments, community partners and local food businesses.

Individuals with previous experience on boards or volunteer committees who can demonstrate passion, expertise and experience in relation to food systems work are particularly encouraged to apply. Edmonton Food Council members are champions for Edmonton's food system! They have played a key role in advancing community discussions on community gardens, urban agriculture, urban beekeeping and urban hen keeping. They provide input into key City of Edmonton strategies including the End Poverty Strategy and Breathe: Edmonton's Green Network Strategy.
