

City draws out creative student ideas for infill

June 17, 2016

The City's Infill Design School Program asks Edmonton students to consider the history of Edmonton's mature neighbourhoods along with personal preferences as they design their very own infill dream home.

City planners have been visiting the classrooms of students in Grades 4 to 6 across the City and many students have already submitted drawings, which can be viewed on the Infill Design School Program website.

The drawings are meant to inspire architects and designers participating in Edmonton's first ever infill design competition to think outside the box by exposing them to the ideas, preferences and creativity of young Edmontonians.

Families and other school classes are also welcome to work through the program on their own and submit drawings to evolvinginfill@edmonton.ca by August 31, 2016 at 5 p.m. The drawings submitted will be featured on the Infill Design Competition website and at the Competition's Awards Gala in the Fall.

Infill is a form of home building that preserves the livability of existing neighbourhoods and has been occurring in Edmonton since 1920. The City of Edmonton is excited to promote and celebrate innovation, character sensitive design, and advance the design ethic for infill development in Edmonton.
