Seasonal parking ban declared

March 12, 2017

The City of Edmonton is declaring a seasonal parking ban on priority routes effective at 7 a.m. Monday, March 13.

"With the snowfall over the weekend, we are focusing our efforts on arterial roads, bus routes and collector roads," said Eduardo Sosa, Director of Roadway Maintenance. "Please find alternate parking if you park on a designated No seasonal parking area, so we can clear the roads quickly and efficiently."

Vehicles parked on designated parking ban routes after 7 a.m. Monday will be subject to tagging and towing for as long as the ban is in effect so that roadway maintenance crews can do as effective and efficient a job as possible. Residents are reminded that even if plows have made an initial pass, the ban will remain in effect until plowing is complete across the entire city. Those who park on routes covered by the ban will remain subject to tagging/towing until the ban is officially lifted.

Crews are working around the clock plowing and sanding City roads and sidewalks. Drivers are reminded to be cautious and drive for winter conditions.

The City does not expect to have a neighbourhood blading cycle at this time.
