Summer daycamp registration opens

March 14, 2017

Registration for City of Edmonton daycamps opens Wednesday, March 15, 2017. Whether your child is an athlete, an artist or a performer, daycamps offer a wide variety of fun activities to keep children busy all summer long.

Daycamps are available for children between 3 ½ and 17 years of age at locations across the City.

Some of Edmonton's best attractions, including the Edmonton Valley Zoo, the Muttart Conservatory, and John Janzen Nature Centre, are once again offering daycamps at their learning centres.

For kids who love outdoor adventure, daycamps in the River Valley teach skills including orienteering, canoeing, camping and more. City golf courses also offer camps for aspiring young golfers that combine golf lessons with a variety of sports and activities.

Neighbourhood Daycamps are offered at convenient locations in over 90 communities, giving children the opportunity to explore and make friends close to home.

For youth between 13 and 17, volunteer positions are also available. These positions help youth develop leadership skills and gain experience to build their resumes, as well as enjoy the fun summer activities themselves!

Registration will be available online and through 311.

More information on all available camps and volunteer opportunities can be found in the 2017 Summer Daycamps Guide, found at edmonton.ca/daycamps.
