What's next in Infill? You tell us.

April 27, 2017

The last steps in the City of Edmonton's Infill Roadmap were put into action in January and we've already seen positive results in our communities. So what's next? The City of Edmonton is asking you to continue the conversation through the Evolving Infill project.

Evolving Infill will explore how we can welcome new homes and new neighbours into our older communities, with a focus on medium and higher density housing. Tell us what you think about the future of infill in our City and how we can build on the work already under way through the Infill Roadmap?

To start the conversation, the City has released a new video in the Everyone's Edmonton series. As well, workshops in May and June will provide opportunities for Edmontonians to talk about how our communities can evolve, and brainstorm potential next best steps to "growing in." Dates and registration are available online at the City Of Edmonton Infill webpage.

What you tell us in this phase of engagement will contribute to the development of a set of draft recommendations that will, after further refinement and engagement next year, direct infill work and planning over the next few years. As Edmonton grows into one of the largest municipalities in Canada, the City is committed to creating a sustainable, balanced approach to welcoming more people into all our neighbourhoods. We hope you will join us.
